WINTER 2020 | ISSUE 9

A LETTER FROM THE CHIEF EXECUTIVE OFFICER

Where does one begin to discuss the legacy of Carolyn Fish? If you knew Carolyn, you know she was a force of nature, a visionary who worked tirelessly and established herself as the go-to person on issues surrounding intimate partner violence, gender-based violence and women's rights. She was a nationally recognized expert and lecturer in the field. Carolyn was a trailblazer, becoming an advocate for social justice long before the term advocate was commonplace. In the 1970s, she became involved in the Women's Movement and focused on issues largely unheard of at the time - the needs of "battered women."

In 1979, Carolyn and a group of concerned citizens founded Rockland Family Shelter and our 24-Hour Hotline that provided a lifeline to women and children escaping violence and abuse at the hands of their partners. Under Carolyn's leadership and vision, the Center expanded services to include non-residential offices where survivors of domestic violence and sexual assault could turn for advocacy, safety planning, legal assistance and crime victim services. Carolyn and her team established our education and training department providing educational program outreach in schools and offering the Teen Dating Violence Prevention Program, the first of its kind in the county.

Our agency is truly fortunate to have had Carolyn as our leader. On Valentine's Day, I celebrated 20 years of service at Center for Safety & Change. Carolyn hired me as a part-time evening hotline receptionist and mentored me to be the Chief Executive Officer. I learned many lessons from Carolyn. She taught me what it meant to be a true advocate for others. Carolyn continuously reminded me that domestic violence and sexual assault are part of a larger societal problem of oppression. She also taught me that focusing on domestic violence without focusing on sexism, racism, anti-Semitism and homophobia was not looking at the person as a whole and made me realize that we cannot fight this alone. The fight must include the entire community - that is the only way to change attitudes and behaviors, while recognizing that violence and abuse are unacceptable. For these life lessons and many others, I am so grateful.

With each day, as we continue to support victims and survivors of all crime, the Center will hold Carolyn Fish in our hearts. As always, she will continue to shine a bright light on our path, guiding the way and teaching us so many more lessons as we work together to end gender-based violence and other forms of oppression.

Respectfully,

Elizabeth Santiago

IN LOVING MEMORY OF CAROLYN FISH

She blocked him and her ex-boyfriend would still find ways of contacting her.

Seventeen-year-old Vanessa was a senior at a local high school who loved art, music and acting. She was extremely talented with very well-known colleges and universities courting her. She was hopeful that going away to college would mean getting away from her ex-boyfriend, Rob, who had been emotionally and physically abusive throughout their relationship. Vanessa broke up with Rob, but more than a month later he was still not taking no for an answer. Rob would show up uninvited to her drama club practice and sit in the audience making her feel uncomfortable. Vanessa blocked him on social media, blocked him on her cell phone and told her close friends about his abusive behavior. Her ex-boyfriend would still find ways of contacting her. He would threaten her, call her names because of what she wore in school, and would force her to stay away from her friends. Vanessa was distraught. Constantly worried about what Rob might do next, she had difficulties paying attention in class. She did not want to tell her parents because they were very good friends with Rob's parents, and she didn't want to cause trouble.

While in health class, Vanessa learned more about the teen dating violence prevention program at Center for Safety & Change. The Center's community educator spoke to the class about what healthy relationships look like and what consent was all about. It was after this class that Vanessa spoke to the community educator to ask questions and seek services. The community educator connected Vanessa with an advocate who helped Vanessa understand technology-facilitated abuse and how she could document her boyfriend's abuse in case she wanted to report it to law enforcement. With Vanessa's consent, the advocate made an appointment to meet with her, her parents and the school counselor to discuss this situation and assist with getting her back on track at school.

PROGRAM HIGHLIGHT: TEEN DATING VIOLENCE PREVENTION PROGRAM

February is Teen Dating Violence Awareness Month.

Dating abuse can take many forms including mental and emotional abuse, physical violence and sexual abuse. It transcends all racial, economic and social lines. Most victims of dating abuse are young women.

Studies have shown that:

One in three teenagers has experienced or will experience violence in a dating relationship

Approximately one in five female high school students reports being physically and/or sexually abused by a dating partner

40% of girls ages 14 to 17 report knowing someone their age who has been hit or beaten by a boyfriend

Established in 1999, the Center's Teen Dating Violence Prevention Program (TDVPP) is an in-school-based prevention program where youth learn they can create better, safer relationships when they have reliable information, guidance, experience and models of healthy, respectful relationships. This three-day training program creates an engaging learning atmosphere for meaningful and interactive classroom discussions regarding respectful and healthy relationships, dating violence, sexual assault, consent, gender roles and stereotypes. In Rockland County, the repeated, high demand for TDVPP training among all public school districts is particularly significant evidence of the ongoing need for this program. More than 20,000 students in Rockland have been trained in this program, all at no cost to the schools or districts.

TAKE MY ADVICE

Ask Andrea!

What is an Order of Protection?

An Order of Protection is a court document issued by a judge to restrict the behavior of someone who has harmed or threatened to harm another person. It is used to address various types of safety issues, including, but not limited to situations involving domestic violence. Family Courts, Criminal Courts and Supreme Courts can all issue Orders of Protection, also known as restraining orders in other jurisdictions. Violation of an Order of Protection can result in arrest, sanctions, contempt and incarceration.

What are the benefits of an Order of Protection?

An Order of Protection may direct the offending person not to injure, threaten or harass you, your family, pets or any other person(s) listed in the order. It may include, but is not limited to, directing them to:

- stay away from you and your children
- move out of your home
- follow custody orders
- pay child support
- not have a gun

Where can I get an Order of Protection?

A Family Court Order of Protection is issued as part of a civil proceeding. There is no requirement for the victim to report the offending party to law enforcement. Its purpose is to stop violence within a family, or within an intimate relationship, and provide protection for those individuals affected. All Family Court proceedings are confidential. order of protection in the Family Court, your relationship to the other person must fall into one of the following categories:

- current or former spouse
- someone with whom you have a child in common
- a family member to whom you are related by blood or marriage
- someone with whom you have or have had an “intimate relationship”

An intimate relationship does not have to be a sexual relationship. A relationship may be considered intimate depending on factors such as how often you see each other, or how long you have known each other.

How Do I Get an Order of Protection?

If you are a victim of domestic violence and reside in Rockland County, call the Center for Safety & Change 24-Hour Hotline at (845) 634-3344. An advocate will connect you to an attorney who can provide an emergency consultation and discuss your options and the process. All services are free, confidential, multi-lingual and available regardless of immigration status.

Gender-based violence is shockingly common but it doesn't always get the attention it deserves. As a volunteer, I am about changing the narrative to ensure that violence stops against women and girls.

Center announces the election of a new Board President, Vice President and the appointment of new board members. Newly elected Board Chair Linie Chang Rand will take over from outgoing President Kathy Perrotte. Kathy served on the board since 2012 and was elected Board President in 2016. Kathy was instrumental in keeping the agency afloat during the government shutdown last year and has established various vehicles ensuring the agency's future financial viability. Kathy will remain on the executive board and serve as co-treasurer along with Mark Jacobs, succeeding Ray Hegarty who will continue board membership. Jill Kaliff, an 18 year veteran on the Board will succeed John J. Manna as Vice President; however, John will remain on the Board. Sandy Page-Cook will continue the role of secretary. We thank Kathy, John and Ray for supporting the agency in this volunteer capacity and welcome Linie and Jill in their new leadership roles.

Linie and Jill recently co-chaired the agency's 40th Anniversary Weekend Celebration last year raising a record amount for the agency. The Board also appointed several new members who will help raise awareness for and expand existing programs and initiatives.

"We are thrilled to have a strong board who embody the spirit of community and bring a variety of talent, expertise and energy to the table. Our commitment and dedication are stronger than ever in supporting community members impacted by gender-based violence and all crime in Rockland and beyond," said Elizabeth Santiago, CEO of Center for Safety & Change.

22ND ANNUAL STOP F.E.A.R. COALITION CRIMINAL JUSTICE CONFERENCE

More than 200 attorneys, law enforcement, judges, social workers, medical professionals and advocates attended our 22nd Annual STOP F.E.A.R. Coalition Criminal Justice Conference at RCC. Richard King, MD, Detective Terry Collazo and Cherron Petruzzi, LMSW were honored for their work in supporting victims and survivors while holding perpetrators accountable. Keynote Speaker Amy Herman presented on “Art of Perception,” a training for law enforcement with the objective of enhancing their observation, perception and communication skills through the analysis of art.

Led by Elizabeth Santiago, the Center’s CEO, and Harriet Cornell, Rockland County Legislator, the STOP F.E.A.R. Coalition was formed in 1986 to provide a coordinated community response in supporting survivors of gender-based violence. In 2013, the Center, in collaboration with other entities, formed the STOP F.E.A.R Anti-Human Trafficking Task Force, which has helped develop a coordinated community response to trafficking in Rockland County.
